

The New York Times recently called Trump a liar using the words “lie,” “false,” “falsely claimed” and “untrue” in headlines, lead paragraphs, and top sections of the paper’s Trump coverage. Their editor states that they would be evading the truth by calling him anything else based on their investigative work.

Editors at NPR, on the other hand, state that agencies have a responsibility to provide the facts, but not dictate what the public should believe. In a developed essay, argue the responsibility of the media to present the truth to the public.

Happy Fall Yall!

(P. 407 in Yellow Books) In your groups, discuss and fill in the following group chart.

Name of Lie	Why do people lie this way?	Specific/relevant example
The White Lie
Facades
Ignoring the Plain Facts
Deflecting
Omission
Stereotypes & Cliches
Groupthink
Out-and-Out Lies
Dismissal
Delusion		